BOTH HOUSES REPEAL RUN-OFF

Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

THE bill to repeal Arkansas' 1932 runoff primary law has passed both houses of the legislature and now goes to Governor Futrell. The governor will veto it promptly and vigorously if he keeps the faith with the rank and file of citizens who supported him in 1932 and 1934.

Two-Gun Barber of Leadville Shoots Down Robber Pair

Norton's Final Letter Is Thriller From Great Mine Boom Days

FIGHT WITH COOK

Night Clerk Job in Hotel Comes to Abrupt End—He Heads Home

Editor's Note: This is the last of a series of nine letters written by S. G. Norton, 520 North Hervey street, this city, to Sam E. McMath, former Hope man now living at Bisbee, Ariz. in which Mr. Norton tells thrilling chapters from his life in the 80's. Star readers will remember Mr. McMath's two series of letters on his experiences along the Mexican border—but this time it is Mr. Norton who is telling the story:

Dear Sam: Shortly after being discharged from the hospital at Santa Fe, I got a job with Charlie Uter, better known as "Colorado Charlie," who ran a gambling hall on the plaza. Charlie was one of the best of the old-time scouts and Indian fighters. He was indeed a quaint old character. His long, curly hair hung down to his shoulders. A pair of Colt's six-shooters always adorned his belt, and his dexterity with which he handled these guns was marvelous to behold. Daily practice in shooting was a rite he observed as punctually as an athlete in training for an important event.

I had been with Charlie but a few weeks when I heard of the big mining boom at Leadville, Colorado. Again I felt the urge to travel. It was a devious route from Santa Fe to Leadville, and with railroad fare so high, I decided to beat my way. I was put off a Santa Fe train three times between Lamy, Junction and La Junta, Colorado. The crew thought they had got rid of me after my third ejection, but when we arrived at La Junta and the conductor saw me crawl out from under a coach, he all but had a spasm.

The next leg of my journey from La Junta to Pueblo, was without incident. Between Pueblo and Leadville I viewed the magnificent Royal Gorge from an excellent vantage point—the top of the baggage car. I have made that trip many times since—the last time with Mrs. Norton and Rebecca—but the society of my family and the comforts of an observation car didn't rival the thrills of that first trip.

Two-Gun Barber
Tales I heard of Leadville's boom were not exaggerated. The town was filled with adventurers and miners. Cheesnut street was a hive of industry. Robbery was a common thing after dark. One instance I vividly recall. A barber shop closed for the night. One of the barbers slipped a

Local Postoffice Only 19 Per Cent Behind 1929 Peak

Postmaster Wilson Reveals Steady Gain Since "Bottom" in 1932

JANUARY IS BETTER

Last Month Only 8 Per Cent Behind January of Peak Year 1929

Hope postoffice figures—probably the surest index to local business activity—show a steady increase since the "bottom" in 1932. Postmaster Robert M. Wilson told The Star Tuesday. And the year 1934 was only 19 per cent below the peak figure of 1929. Furthermore, this January continued to recover ground in even faster fashion, closing only 8 per cent behind January in the peak year 1929.

Mr. Wilson gave The Star the following figures on postal receipts, the peak year 1929, and the march of recovery from the bottom year 1932:

Year	1929	1932	1934
1929	$31,030.49
1932		$21,425.00
1933			$23,203.73
1934			$25,027.52

The January showing for the same years:

Year	1929	1932	1934
1929	2,618.19
1932		1,561.34
1933			2,180.54
1934			2,413.96

Cancellations for January, 1935, were 10 per cent better than for January a year ago, while money orders, both paid and issued, ran in about the same proportion as postal receipts, Mr. Wilson said.

Townsend Says Plan Is Sane

"If you believe that my old age pension plan is cock-eyed, you must also believe that millions of people who are behind it are cock-eyed," declared Dr. Frank B. Townsend, appearing before the House Ways and Means Committee to "set it right." Townsend is shown, right, after he rose from a hospital bed to make his plea. With him is Representative John S. McGowan, of California, who introduced the bill for the Townsend plan to the House.

Bishop Moore to Speak Here Friday

Education Rally Is to Be Held at First Methodist Church

Bishop John W. Moore, in charge of the North Arkansas and Little Rock conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will be the principal speaker at an educational rally to be held at First Methodist Church, of Hope, Friday night at 7 o'clock.

Had this week in the Little Rock Conference, and includes the Prescott, Toxarkana and part of the Arkadelphia districts. Although the purpose of this rally is to show the value and importance of the church college, yet no collection will be taken nor any pledges asked for.

In addition to Bishop Moore, who is an outstanding and forceful preacher, the program will include messages from Dr. W. W. Alexander, Secretary,

Department of Schools and Colleges,

General Board of Christian Education of Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. C. J. Greene,

Hauptmann Loses Three Skirmishes in Court Tuesday

Efforts to Attack State's Testimony Consistently Fail

RAISES FISCH GHOST

Open Accusation He Received Ransom Thrown Out of Court

Copyright Associated Press
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Bruno Richard Hauptmann's defense lost three legal skirmishes Tuesday and openly accused the dead Isador Fisch of collecting the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom.

The court ruled out a defense effort to show that Fisch visited a woman on Long Island, bearing certain packages.

The court also suppressed, at least temporarily, a defense subpoena which would have required Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf to produce releases which he gave the newspapers during the kidnap investigation.

The court also ruled out the testimony of a theater patron with which the defense intended to attack the memory of a state witness who said Hauptmann spent a ransom bill.

The defense hinted it might attack the mental condition of Dr. John F. (Jafie) Condon.

The defense also sought through a Bronx taxicab driver to offset the adverse story of another taxi driver who said Hauptmann gave him a dollar to deliver a ransom note. The defense sought to show through the testimony of Philip Moses, taxicabman, that four persons were near the cemetery at the time of the ransom payment.

All Point to Bruno
FLEMINGTON, N. J.—(AP)—Every available clue in the Lindbergh baby kidnapping mystery led to "nobody else but Hauptmann," Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, head of the New Jersey state police, testified at the 24th day of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's trial for the crime Monday.

It was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's 33d birthday anniversary and he was in court again, following closely the testimony of the man who directed forces attempting to solve the crime.

He heard a parade of defense witnesses attempting to strengthen alibis for the prisoner, attempt to incriminate the Morrow maid, Violet Sharpe, attempt to prove that a man in an automobile containing a ladder near the Lindbergh estate the afternoon before the kidnapping was not Hauptmann.

Colonel Schwarzkopf was called by the defense which immediately began to dig at testimony on fingerprints found at the Lindbergh nursery and on the kidnap ladder.

Schwarzkopf was asked if a dowel pin resembling one in the kidnap ladder had not been found in a corner of the Colonel Lindbergh's library after the kidnapping.

His reports, the place superintendent testified, did not contain that. On other questions Colonel Schwarzkopf said he must refer to official reports before answering. The police head said experiments with a ladder modelled on the kidnap ladder proved it had broken under a weight of 180 pounds.

Suspects Eliminated
Attorney General David T. Wilentz, by cross-examination, shaped the testimony of Colonel Schwarzkopf toward sealing the case against Hauptmann.

6 Millions in New Revenue Bills Are Before General Assembly

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—The house Tuesday passed by a vote of 56 to 43 Senator Holloway's bill which would repeal the runoff primary law.

The bill now goes to the governor, and, if he signs it, it will end the double-primary system instituted in 1933.

A Bitter Debate
LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Oratory filled the house chamber Tuesday, as Senator Holloway's bill to repeal the runoff primary law drew a sharp cleavage among exponents of "Jeffersonian Democracy."

The noon recess interrupted the battle, with each side predicting victory. The debate was the only feature of otherwise dull proceedings in both houses.

Mason, of Ouachita county, declared the people forced the legislature to enact the run-off law two years ago and are demanding that it be retained.

To Raise $ Millions
LITTLE ROCK.—The joint committee appointed 10 days ago to make a study of prospective revenue sources will report to the senate and house that estimated receipts from all the revenue bills now pending in the legislature would total approximately $6,175,000.

The committee did not consider the merits of any of the bills and will not make a recommendation as to whether any of them should be passed, but merely assembles estimates of the revenue that might be expected from each.

Dr. C. O. Brannen, head of the Department of Rural Economics at the University of Arkansas, prepared estimates on some of the measures at the request of the committee.

He estimated that the proposed two per cent sales tax bill would yield $3,700,000 a year; that a bill to lower income tax exemptions would yield $30,000 on the basis of 1931 income tax collections; that the Dillon licensed liquor store bill would bring in $800,000 a year; that the Fagan chain store bill would yield $75,000 a year and the Gilbert bill, $36,000, and that a proposed racing bill would bring in $153,000 a year.

Representative Eugene Hampton submitted an estimate that the proposed racing bill would bring in $153,000 a year from two 30-day meetings at Hot Springs, and that a proposed tax on slot machines (not yet introduced) would yield $812,000 a year.

T. Roy Reid, assistant director in charge of the State Agricultural Extension Service, submitted a report on a proposed soft drink tax, in which he said such a tax in South Carolina yielded $142,000 in 1933 and more than $90,000 in 1934. He estimated that a similar tax in Arkansas would yield only about two-thirds as much as in South Carolina because that state has a large number of textile towns with semi-monthly pay rolls. The population is approximately the same as Arkansas' population.

Representative Cummings of Washington county estimated that a bill be introduced to increase the taxable value of corporation stock without par value from $25 to $50 would yield around $90,000 a year.

It was brought out in the discussion that the proposed sales tax bill would blanket the proposed soft drink tax and possibly some of the other proposed taxes.

Vote On Insurance Bill
The Senate Insurance Committee voted 4 to 3 Monday night that S. B. 153 (Barney and Shaver), providing for a State Insurance Commission empowered to regulate special cut-rate stock fire insurance companies, be reported back to the senate with the recommendation "do not pass."

The vote was cast after two and a half hours of heated argument on the merits of the bill between its two sponsors and representatives of fire insurance companies and agencies in the ballroom lobby at the Hotel Marion. The crowd packed itself into the room after the committee had moved from its scheduled meeting place in a Parlor B because of insufficient space.

The principal attack on the proposed measure was made by J. Gilbert Leigh, who, with John K. Shepherd, spoke for the insurance group.

Senator Shaver opened discussion with an explanation of the purpose of the bill, saying that although the

Glass Attacks Treasury Plan, Declaring Hs Is "Double-Crossed"

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—A new Treasury-drafted bill increasing the powers of the Federal Reserve System based over the nation's banking system was disclosed Tuesday to have been prepared after conferences with President Roosevelt.

But the memorandum sent to the capital by the executive refrained from giving his personal endorsement to it.

Glass Is Angry
WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration's plan to clothe the Federal Reserve System with vast new power of America's banking system faced the prospect of a momentous fight Tuesday as Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, charged that a pledge had been broken.

Glass, of the senate banking committee, charged that Marriner S. E. Eccles, Federal Reserve Board governor, had promised to show him the amendments to the plan, but failed to do so.

The proposed measure would bestow on the board virtually complete supervision of the credit policies of the nation. The old system of having the 12 Reserve banks, themselves, name the Open Market Policy Committee, which determines Federal Reserve bank participation in the government bond market, would be scrapped.

In its place would be a new committee, consisting of the governor of the board, two board members, and two governors of Reserve banks elected annually by the governors, themselves.

Another suggested change would give the board power of approval over the governors of the 12 banks before they can be elected, a power heretofore lacking.

The bill would abolish the position of Federal Reserve agent, maintained by each of the banks, and combine this office with that of governor. These agents are now appointed by the board here and act as chairman of the boards of the various banks. Appointments would be made annually by the directors.

YOUR HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Take Wrist Exercises Easily and Patiently

When your wrist is injured seriously, and you have had it in a cast for repair, you must put it through a series of strengthening exercises after the cast is removed.

And, since so many small bones, ligaments, and muscles are involved, the exercises range from the simplest to the more complicated and must be taken with extreme care and patience.

The hand, like the wrist, is capable of practically every kind of motion, and must be exercised just as carefully. At first the exercises should be controlled by a physician or physiotherapist, who moves the joints while you make no effort at all.

After such controlled motion, the time finally comes when you can undertake certain exercises to improve functions and activities of wrist, hand and fingers. The following course is suggested:

1. Hand resting on little finger: (a) Bend wrist forward, keeping fingers straight. Resist with pressure on palm near wrist. (b) Bend wrist back as far as possible, keeping fingers bent. Resist with pressure on back of hand near wrist.

2. Hand resting on table, palm down: (a) Move hand toward thumb. Resist with pressure on thumb near wrist. (b) Move hand toward little finger. Resist with pressure on little finger side of hand near wrist.

3. Hand resting on little finger, wrist bent back to bend the fingers, and forward to straighten them. Bend fingers at first joint, keeping other joints straight. Resist with pressure just above first joint.

4. Hand resting on table, palm down: (a) Spread fingers flat on table. Resist by grasping fingers with other hand. (b) Bring fingers together. Resist by putting fingers of one hand between those of other.

5. Arm resting on little finger side of hand, bring tip of thumb to tip of each finger, making a circle. Resist with pressure between tips.

6. Repeat exercise 5, grasping a towel between finger tips; with other hand try to pull towel out of grasp.

7. Close all fingers and thumb to a tight fist and open fully. Repeat against resistance offered by other hand.

8. Hand resting on little finger and forearm on table, elbow bent to a right angle: (a) Turn hand so that palm rests on table. (b) Turn hand so that the palm faces up, being careful that movement is not made in shoulder.

9. Carry a book between thumb and fingers flat on the book, arm at side.

10. Carry book on palm of hand, with fingers straight.

11. Pick up a soft rubber ball, grasping and letting go. Repeat with smaller balls.

12. Wring out different sizes of cloth.

When you have developed sufficient ability to move the hand, wrist, and fingers satisfactorily, you may then take up any type of fine work, such as basket weaving, leather work, and carpentry, to get the finer motions under control.

Cells New Deal Aid to Rich and Not To Poor

This Book Sees Little Gain in FDR's "Revolution"

In "The Economic Consequences of the New Deal," Benjamin Stolberg and Warren Jay Vinton suggest that the forgotten man is in much the same position as the bemused countrymen to whom city slickers have just sold the Brooklyn bridge.

These authors, quite bluntly, see the New Deal as a fake, whose net results will be to leave the titans of finance and industry in a stronger position than ever before.

"The thing that outrages our social economy is the irresponsible power of great wealth," they write. "The ravages which big ownership inflicts on our society can be gaged on the slide rule of economic statistics. The figures are clear. What is bad for big ownership is bad for the rest of us." And yet, they complain, practically all that has been done in Washington is in the interest of big ownership. There has been no attempt to solve the contradictions of a scarcity economy trying to function in an era of plenty.

"The New Deal," they say, "is merely the capture of government by the scientific social workers. It is merely a remodeling of the White House into the Hull House. And the Brain Trusters are nothing but settlement workers who want the big bad bankers and the good little workers to play together in peace."

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Complex Matters Baffle Children

"Bye-bye," said grandma to little Emmy Jo. "I'll see you tomorrow."

"Not tomorrow, mother," her daughter reminded her. "You won't be here until Saturday."

"What is the difference?" grandma said. "She doesn't know one day from another. She's only three."

"Well, I am trying to teach her what yesterday and tomorrow mean. She knows what today is."

"Does she? I doubt it. You children never had any sense of time and not one of you turned out to be queer. Unless it's you with your notions of forcing this baby."

"I don't force her at all. I just believe in beginning early to regulate her mind and make her think. You have to have early beginnings in everything."

"Don't Mix Her Up"

"All right. No harm done. But don't make her worry about it and get all mixed up. You wouldn't by any chance be trying to teach her 'to tell time'?"

"Not right now, but I'm going to go right along with all sorts of things and teach her to reason."

"If she can tell time before she's seven years old your fortune's made. She'll be ready for the circus," remarked grandma caustically. "Well, I must go. Good-bye, Jo-Jo. See you tomorrow."

"My name's Emmy Jo," the little girl said.

"Of course, it is. If anybody else had said that to you I would have sent him kiting." Aside to mother.

"I knew better than that. I am thoroughly ashamed. Go on now, honey and eat your breakfast and then take your nap."

Her daughter had to laugh now at the blustering lady who sailed down the walk, got into her car and began to toot her way down the street.

"Breakfast." The child had had her breakfast hours ago, and it was nearly lunch time. What a good thing Grandma only blew in twice a week.

If she was there much, she would have her baby all mixed up.

Trying the impossible

What Mrs. Smith did not know was that she was trying the impossible herself. Her mother was right. Although the baby was smart in her way and could count to ten and even name her letters, it would be a long time before she would be able to make comparisons because, as every one knows, this is something else again.

In another year, perhaps, it will dawn on Emmy Jo that there is a difference between yesterday and tomorrow. It won't take much teaching to tell her names. And she will begin to get the names of her meals straightened out. But now her ideas of relative time are indeed nebulous.

As for telling time, a child will be able to work out that compound arithmetic, perhaps when he is six if he is smart. More likely when he is seven. And most likely when he is eight. Too many children are shamed unnecessarily about time-telling. It does have to be explained to them without nature's magic, but when the time is ripe they get it quickly.

Early training does not mean early forcing. Follow nature, don't try to show her the way.

WHEN? The filing period begins January 1 and ends March 15, 1935.

WHERE? Collector of internal revenue for the district in which the person lives or has his principal place of business.

HOW? See instructions on forms 1040A and 1040.

WHAT? Four percent normal tax on the amount of net income in excess of the personal exemption, credit for dependents, earned income credit, dividends of domestic corporations subject to taxation, an interest on obligations of the United States and obligations of instrumentalities of the United States. Surplus on net income in excess of $4,000.

No. 1

How to Avoid Common Errors

The period for the filing of income-tax returns covering the calendar year 1934 begins January 1 and ends at midnight of March 15. Within this period are filed annually millions of individual income-tax returns, a large proportion of which report income subject to the tax. The latter contain a considerable percentage of errors, which if uncorrected by the audit would result to the disadvantage of the taxpayer. Many are errors of computation easily discovered on the face of the return, which usually is accompanied by a payment of more than the amount of tax due. In other returns it is readily discernable that the taxpayer has failed to take advantage of the personal exemption, credit allowed for dependents, or deductions from gross income to which he is entitled.

To avoid these and other errors, the Bureau of Internal Revenue urges careful reading of the instructions on the forms for filing the returns. Additional information, if needed, may be obtained at the office of a collector of internal revenue, deputy collector, or an internal revenue agent in charge. Also, as a further aid in the preparation of a correct income-tax return for the year 1934, the Bureau has prepared a series of short newspaper articles, of which this is the first, advising the salaried man, wage earner, professional and business man—in fact, every class of individual taxpayer—of his requirements and privileges as interpreted under the latest regulations, rulings, and decisions relating to the income-tax law.

Small Fry Enjoy Foods Fried in Deep Fat

BY MARY E. DAGUE

NEA Service Staff Writer

I remember when I was an underfoot youngster that the surest portent of something extra special to eat occurred when mother put the deep fat kettle on the stove to heat. Usually, in those days, it was doughnuts or crullers or croquettes that would come tumbling out of the crackling grease, cooked to a luscious, irresistible brown. Occasionally, as a winter night treat, there would be fritters, their fruity odors summoning even the most reluctant diner from the far corners of the house.

There are lots of foods that taste their sumptuous best when cooked in deep fat, and right here I'd like to start a revival of that method of cooking.

Foods properly fried in deep fat can be included in the diet of any healthy person; as a matter of fact, deep fat frying is superior to pan frying since less fat is absorbed.

How to Clarify Fat

The temperature of the fat determines the digestibility of the food. It's the overheating of fat that makes fried food harmful, so a thermometer should be used as a guide.

However, the fat must be hot enough to sear the outside of the food immediately to form a crust and prevent the fat from soaking through.

Any good clean fat or oil is suitable, and if given proper care, can be used over and over again.

To clarify fat from unsalted meats, add sliced raw potatoes, washed but not pared, to cold fat. Heat very slowly and when the bubbling in the fat (due to the water in the potatoes) ceases, remove from fire and strain through double thicknesses of cheesecloth.

Strain Fat After Using

Always strain fat through double cheesecloth each time it is used. This removes the particles of food or flour that have settled to the bottom of the frying kettle during cooking. Careful straining and an occasional clarifying keep the fat sweet and clear.

Fritters, doughnuts and uncooked mixtures generally are put into fat

Tomorrow's Menu

Breakfast: Halves of grapefruit, cereal, cream, creamed salt pork on toast with cream, milk, coffee.

Luncheon: Clam broth with whipped cream, toasted crackers, scalloped tomatoes, rice pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner: Mock drumsticks, potatoes au gratin, buttered new cabbage, peas and peanut butter salad, French doughnuts filled with whipped cream, milk, coffee.

French Doughnuts

One cup boiling water, 1/2 cup butter, 1 cup bread flour, 4 eggs. Add butter to boiling water and when butter is melted add all at once the flour which has been sifted. Stir vigorously as flour is added and continue to stir until a stiff dough is formed that will not stick to the sauce pan. Remove from fire and let cool two or three minutes. Then beat in eggs, one at a time, adding each only after the one before has been thoroughly beaten into the dough. Put into a pastry bag and form in circles about two inches in diameter. Slip the sheet of paper into a kettle of fat heated to 370 degrees F. and keep the temperature at 350 during the frying. Cook about five minutes or until the doughnuts are well puffed and nicely browned. Slip off of paper table, a plate of toast and another containing a fried egg.

"Sit down and eat," she told him. "I'm going to run over to see Mrs. O'Connor."

She was out of the room and back again an instant later, pulling on her coat. "Father's asleep," she said. "I guess it will be all right to leave him if Mrs. O'Connor can come over."

Mrs. O'Connor could. She listened sympathetically to Gale's account of what had happened the night before, and said she'd be glad to take Tom Henderson's lunch. The poor man—him such a hard worker and always glad to do a good turn for a neighbor.

"I'm his brother, you know," Mrs. O'Connor confided, "he had them spells when he couldn't get his breath. Oh, it was terrible! I've seen him that bad, I'm telling you."

The shrill blast of a whistle interrupted.

"Oh!" exclaimed Gale, panting. "I'll be late at the mill! Here, Mrs. O'Connor, here's the key!"

She turned and fled down the walk.

HER breath was still coming in deep gasps as she entered the big room and hurried to her place. She bent her head, fingers flying. Somehow she knew, though she did not look up, that Fisher, the foreman, was crossing the room coming toward her. She knew what he would say. She had heard him say it to others.

"You there!"

"Yes, Mr. Fisher."

The heavily sarcastic voice rose loudly. "So you decided to come to work today, did you? Well, that's certainly very nice! Made up your mind at the last minute. I suppose—after you'd heard the whistle. Do you know what time the switches are turned on here?"

"Yes, Mr. Fisher."

"Then what's the idea of coming in five minutes late? Do you think you can get away with that? Do you think we can run this mill with everyone coming to work when they please?"

Girls all around heard what he was saying. It was impossible for them not to hear. Gale's cheeks were burning.

Without waiting for an answer Fisher went on. "Maybe you think there ought to be some changes around here—so you can drop in to work whenever you feel like it! Well, let me tell you, there'll be changes all right if this happens again. Five minutes late, you were. Five minutes late! If it happens again, Miss Highnam, there'll be a new girl standing right where you are. Do you understand that? You'll be through!"

Gale said, "Yes, Mr. Fisher." She could scarcely hear her own voice but she got the words out.

He started away and then turned back. "If it happens once more—"

He said menacingly.

Gale did not answer. She bent her head and snapped a bobbin off.

hearing on beauty than any amount of preparations that are to be rubbed on the surface. If you get enough sleep, take exercise and eat the right food, there's no reason under the sun why you should go around with a sour expression. Learn to think pleasant thoughts about the people you know, the situations you are forced to face. Remember that mere prettiness can be painted on the surface, but true beauty comes from within. Stop worrying about lack of money to spend on creams and lotions and do the best you can with material that costs little but which is much more effective.

Gratitude.
Be grateful for the kindly friends that walk along your way;
Be grateful for the skies of blue that smile from day to day;
Be grateful for the health you own, the work you find to do,
For round about you there are men less fortunate than you.
Be grateful for the growing trees, the roses soon to bloom,
The tenderness of kindly hearts that share your days of gloom.
Acquire the grateful habit, learn to see how blessed you are,
How much there is to gladden life, how little life to mar!
And what if rain should fall tomorrow and you with grief are sad;
Be grateful for this cheery sunshiny day that you have had. —E. A. G.

short, through deaths and resignations. Four, headed by Chief Justice Chase, voted the Legal Tender acts unconstitutional, though Chase had been active in securing their passage as secretary of the treasury. The same day this decision was rendered, President Grant appointed men to fill the two vacancies on the court. A rehearing was held, the two new appointees made the minority of three a majority of five, and the acts were upheld.

Grant maintained that his appointments were a mere coincidence, as he had no idea what the decision of the court was to be.

But the public has always assumed that the court was "packed" to insure a desired decision, and this served to lower its standing with the public.

Overturns Congress Acts
In 81 years from 1789 to 1868, only four acts of Congress were declared invalid. But between 1860 and 1900, there were 23 such decisions, and since then some 30 more.

The court began to turn from nationalism toward states' rights, notably in the famous slaughterhouse cases. A "corrupt-bag" legislature, probably corrupt, had granted a monopoly in parts of New Orleans of the slaughterhouse business, throwing thousands out of work.

Test cases came to the Supreme Court under the new 14th Amendment, aimed at reconstruction by guaranteeing a uniform federal standard of civil rights throughout the Union: that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor denied equal protection of the laws.

By its decision for the monopoly, many believed the court had virtually nullified the civil rights effect of the amendment, since it turned the whole matter over to the states. This "due process" clause has been the basis of judicial argument ever since, and no final determination has been made as to what it means.

Economies to Fare
Gradually the cases of the court became economic rather than political as the country itself shifted in similar manner. In the Granger cases against grain elevator monopolies, the court set the principle that "Property does become clothed with a public interest when used in a manner to make it of public consequence, and affect the community at large."

That is a basis for regulation of such business and property.

In the early years of this century, various decisions, such as the Debs case, which supported Cleveland's use of the military to see the U. S. mails through strike violence, the income tax case, and various cases affecting state laws restricting hours of labor, convinced most people that the court was on the side of property against labor and the common unpropertied man.

For the last 30 years, and before, continual efforts have been made to restrict the power of the Supreme Court to nullify acts of Congress.

Theodore Roosevelt and the La Follette progressive group campaigned vigorously for popular recall of judicial decisions by less cumbersome methods than by amending the Constitution.

Holmes' Broad View
Even Justice Holmes has said, "I don't think the United States would come to an end if we lost our power to declare an act of Congress void. I do think the Union would be imperiled if we could not make that declaration as to the laws of the several states."

Proposals have been made to empower Congress to re-pass laws over the judicial "veto," whereupon they would stand, not subject to further court review. Secretary Wallace has proposed to amend the Constitution by popular vote instead of by states, providing a quick reversal of any Supreme Court decision considered as thwarting the people's will.

Vital Decisions Pending
As more than 40 important cases have been decided by the court by a majority of one, a proposal has also been made that constitutional questions shall be decided only by a greater majority concurring, say 7 to 2.

Now this court, which has been one of the most distinctive features of the American form of government, is about to decide on Congress and the president's acts of dollar devaluation and abrogation of the promise to pay debts in gold or its equivalent.

Other vital decisions on the laws Congress has made in its strenuous effort to lift America out of economic stagnation will come soon. The eyes of the 125,000,000 are on the Supreme Court.

"motives of the sponsors" had been questioned. It was his belief that Senator Barney's sole intent to further legislation which would result in reduced fire rates.

Mr. Leigh spoke briefly, saying the motives of the sponsors were not questioned by insurance men but that it was his belief the authors had not been informed regarding the present insurance law. He asked Senator Shaver if he had familiarized himself with the present law before drafting his measure.

"I'm just a country lawyer," the senator said, "but I didn't come down here to be put under cross-examination."

tion on the technicalities of fire insurance by a man who has been in that business for 20 or 25 years. You take the bill and show me what's wrong with it. If I'm wrong, I'll withdraw it."

Several Factors Discussed
Mr. Leigh did not continue his discussion at that time, but introduced Mr. Shepherd, who explained the "burning ratio," "average rate" and other factors entering into insurance rates in Arkansas as compared to the same factors in other states.

Only one other state, Mississippi, in this section of the country, has a higher "burning ratio" than Arkansas, while Missouri has a "burning ratio" of 54 cents on each $100 of insurance in force compared to 94 cents in Arkansas, he said.

"Many, many efforts have been made toward lowering the cost of fire insurance rates but, except those having to do with better building construction, housekeeping and improved water and fire protection, the major attack has been on the symptoms rather than the disease," Mr. Shepherd said. "It is so much easier to win the immediate political applause by attack upon a corporation to which the people have paid what they regard as high rates of insurance than it is to fight the crowdswomen responsible for the fire losses that we just follow the line of least resistance."

six-shooter in each of his overcoat pockets, remarking that he was going to get him a hold-up man. As he stepped around the corner within a block of his shop he was accosted by two men and ordered to throw up his hands. He did, but with a blazing gun in each. He killed both robbers. I failed to find work in Louisville, and decided to move on to Denver. I stopped off at Buena Vista and got a job as night clerk in the Valley View Hotel. Buena Vista was at the junction of the Denver and Rio Grande and the Denver and South Pass railroads. The hotel was at the railroad station and serving meals to passengers was the main source of its income. All trains stopped there for meals. Two trains met there each day at noon. One of my duties was to help in the dining room during rush hour. One day I got into an argument with the Negro cook over an order. I hit him on the head with a vegetable dish. He grabbed a carving knife, jumped over a table and rushed at me. I ran into the dining room, the cook right behind me. As I darted between tables I pelted him with every dish I could lay my hands on. The proprietor stopped the wild scramble by poking a six-shooter into the cook's belly. I was immediately discharged and seven dollars were deducted from my wages to pay for all those broken dishes. I hit the trail again.

Wanderer Returns Home

I went to Denver first, then back to Pueblo and started east on the Santa Fe, still beating my way. I was put off the train at Garden City, Kansas, then a very small village. The foreman of a laboring gang, seeing me dumped off, asked if I wanted a job. He was in charge of a crew building fences along the right-of-way. I stayed with that gang three months. One time our camp cars were on the first siding west of Dodge City when payday came around. All of us suspended work, went to town and indulged in a little riotous living. The rest of the gang went broke before I did and returned to camp without me. Later, when a west-bound passenger train rolled in I boarded it and curled up in a seat near the stove. My plan was to tell the conductor I wanted to go to Denver. Being destitute of funds I knew he would put me off at the next stop which was my real destination. Alas! The conductor overlooked me and I slept blissfully until early the next morning. When I awoke we were at Lakin, near the Colorado line. It took me three days to beat my way back to the camp, and I didn't get a bite to eat during the trip.

A few weeks after this episode, I quit my job, got a pass and went to Kansas City. I bought a new outfit of clothing and decided to seek my fortune in new fields. New Orleans was the city I chose in which to make a new start. As I approached the ticket window a small nostalgic voice whispered: "Buy a ticket to Cleveland." I obeyed and returned to my home and mother. Thus, my first two years in the West when I was really wild and woolly, came to an end.

NOTICE

FINAL NOTICE.

To all real estate owners in Street Improvement District No. 6 and Curb and Gutter District No. 2, in the City of Hope, Arkansas:

You, and each of you, are hereby notified that all delinquent taxes due on any property in said districts will be accepted by W. P. Agee, collector, at any time on or prior to February 15, 1935, without interest or penalty. Interest and penalty will attach after that, and suit will be filed to enforce the payment of all delinquent taxes immediately after February 15th.

This notice is final. We are required under the law to collect the taxes due, and, if we fail to do this and default in the payment of interest or principal on the bonds, the districts will be in danger of Federal Receiverships.

Respectfully,
J. A. HENRY
R. M. PATTERSON
C. C. SPRAGINS
Commissioners.
